THE POBLEMAN OF MARTE.

The treest nobleman of earth, Is be who loves to be The first companion of the good, The hero of the free, Who works and unted for the poor, Who sees no rank in names Whose hopes ascend to heaven in crowds, As sparks fy up from flames !

Give me that pobleman of mind, Who loves a noble cause ; The right of labor's stordy sons. And freedom's righteous laws ! The hater of each evil acheme A tyrant may advance : A giant's strength about his heart,

I love the nobleman of earth. Who strives to bless the age; And leaves a glory that is cought On history's faithful page ! Whose name the millions love to liep, Truth's sure undisching guests ; Who shines in love as does the sun In palace of the West!

Thoughts brilliant in his glance !

He's deathless as the mighty skies, When jeweled through with stars ; Could feel God's beauty in a blase Buret through his prison bare! No mandate from the tyrant preaks His spirit's apward bound ; While high on every liberal gread His same is blassned round !

And perjured kings may pass from earth. Their pump and lustre fade; But nature's nobleman unclasps The cruel laws they've made. His worshipped monarch is his God. He leaves a name behind. Flushed with effulgence that reflects His majesty of mind !
